This Month in Mongolian Studies - December 2005

A publication of the American Center for Mongolian Studies

This is a monthly compendium of important and interesting events taking place at the ACMS in Ulaanbaatar in Mongolian Studies and among the Mongol peoples of the world. This list is based on information our center has received and is presented as a service to ACMS members. If you would like to become a member, have information you would like to submit to future newsletters or have received this message in error, please contact the ACMS at acms_2005 at yahoo dot com.

For more information on each entry, please see the "Announcements" section of the ACMS webpage <mongoliacenter.org> or call our office at (976-11) 314-055.

News from the Center

The Center's Ulaanbaatar office will soon be moving to a new location, one that will provide more space for its members and Center activities, including room for the Centers expanding scholarly library.

New Publications & Resources

New On-Line Resource - Mongolian Electronic Library

The Ministry of Education, Culture and Science held an opening ceremony for the first official Mongolian electronic library www.elibrary.mn on November 25, 2005. The organizers of this project say that they are keen to exploit the rising number of Mongolian households that have computers and the Internet service to provide each Mongolian family with easy access to information technology. Designed and run by Datacom Co., Ltd., the electronic library makes available to internet users anywhere in the world works of classical and modern Mongolian literature belonging to the literary heritage of Mongolia. The project seeks especially to target children and the youth. The site consists of sections of folklore, fiction, children's books, humor and history, with links to information about writers and Mongolian and foreign literature. The site also includes a Top 10 list of books, information about new books and publications, and a discussion forum for site visitors. One of the features of the site is that you can not only read the stories on-line, but also listen to them and download and print for personal use.

On-Line Resource - Mongolian Literary Internet Site

Another electronic library on the internet has been operating since March 2004 www.biirbeh.mn. The site was designed by Mr. T. Batbaatar, a Mongolian who runs it on his spare time. "This is my hobby," he says, "I would like to inspire and encourage people in their life through poetry and stories, and have them to think a little bit about the future." The website contains best poems and stories written by famous Mongolian writers and has links to a discussion forum where visitors to the site can share about their thoughts with others. Visitors can also find beautiful photos and paintings to attach to their favorite stories and even to send as greeting cards to their brothers and sisters, and friends. You can register for the site free of charge. Many thanks to Mr. Batbaatar for offering us a such wonderful website.

On-Line Resource - The China and Eurasia Forum (CEF) Quarterly

The November 2005 issue of the The China and Eurasia Forum (CEF) Quarterly is now available on-line at http://www.silkroadstudies.org/new/inside/publications/CEF_quarterly.htm. The first issue of the CEF Quarterly under new directorship of Niklas Swanstrom focuses of the issue of an energy and security within the China-Eurasia region. Energy security has become one of the most important issues in international relations today. The contributors to this issue seek to explore the implications with this development and how it affects regional security considerations.
